

HELP PEOPLE LEARN SOMETHING NEW... AND THE BEST WAY TO LEARN IT

#7. WHAT I LEARNED

When you start with the purpose of learning something new, there are two types of relevant information you can share.

1. What you learned - in summary or with detail
2. How you learned - the best way to learn, what worked and didn't, what tools were best, who taught you, and so on

Your learning experience will be unique and useful, even if what you learned isn't. You can get at least one article out of a learning experience, even if it's a what-not-to-do.

TITLE EXAMPLES

- 10 Useful Things I Learned at ABC Conference
- Why Learning How to Code May Not be for You

TEMPLATE

WHAT I LEARNED

Open a Word doc and start typing the information following this format. Use this page to collect your ideas.

Introduction

What led you to want to learn something new?

One thing I learned

Brief and straight forward summary.

Why it was good or bad to learn it

Goals met or not?

Practical application

How you will use the learning; your advice.

Your learning experience and how others can do better

Conclusion

Repeat for each point.
Wrap up & Call-to-action